Did you get a letter like this?

Dear Self-Published Author,

"Thanks for spending years grueling away writing your book, stealing precious moments away from family and friends and feeling tired, sore and stressed from hunching over your computer for days on end... but we are not interested in publishing your book. Best of luck to you."

Does this sound familiar?

Well, after spending months writing, I sent out dozens of requests to publishers nationwide hoping they would accept my book.

"Thanks, but no thanks."

The rejection letters poured into my mailbox over the course of six months.

Well, as I opened yet another "NO", and wiped the tears away... it hit me.

Why don't I sell the book myself and help other authors too?

After lots of research, support from family and friends, and hard work, jexbo (a combination of my name and the word "book") was born.

Yay! No more rejection letters!

Fellow self-published authors, now you can control book pricing, marketing and customer contacts!

Instead of counting on others to set your prices and sell your book, now you can market your books how and when you see fit.

You sell directly to customers.

And when you want to change your message or pricing?

No problem, you instantly change it.

- You don't need to wait for approval or spend hours on the phone hassling over terms and "settling" on a compromise.
- No one changes your words, forces you to go through an inflexible procedure or pushes you to sell your books in a way you don't want to sell them.

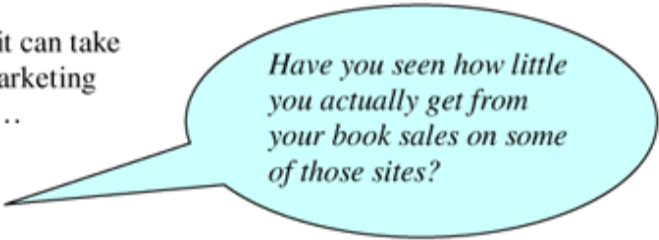

"With jexbo, and the self-publishing process, I had complete control over pricing on my book and my sales message," says Kennebrew Surant, author of "Life on the Line." "There is a certain amount of stress relief that comes from knowing you can make changes in your book-marketing process quickly and easily and take home 95% of the profits from book sales."

Ah, the sweet power of control... for free!

Being in charge is great, but so is having some extra change in your pocket.

And since most of us don't have a lot of spending cash right now, who needs all the added fees involved with the different, "auction sites" out there?

With these overcrowded, online services, it can take months to make changes and have your marketing message look the way you want it to look... all while costing you money.

Have you seen how little you actually get from your book sales on some of those sites?

It's ridiculous.

You do all that work, finally sell your book and then make a pittance from the sale.

Instead, picture yourself posting your book online for worldwide customers to see 24/7... for free!

That's right.

You fill in a few blanks on an online form with your images, message and selling process... and presto!

Your book is online for customers to purchase immediately.

- No hassles dealing with numerous sales people, publishers and attorneys.

This means you receive a full, 95% of book sales – and that's a lot more than other sites.

"In an industry where high distribution costs and online sales red-tape are the norm, jexbo is a phenomenal resource for independent publishers," says Annie Passanisi, co-author of "The SPARK Anthology." "By charging only 5% of sales, jexbo allows me to make more profit per book without sacrificing the convenience of online sales."

And with jexbo:

You get your own, custom Web site without buying a domain name, hosting account, or server.

You know you need to be online in order to sell your book. But who has the time or money to build a Web site, secure a domain name, set up the payment processing and hosting, test the system... Ugh! The list goes on.

You just want to sell your book.

Well, now you can sit back and relax.

Pour yourself a cool beverage and log onto the site at www.jexbo.com.

Write some information about your book on a simple form, add an image – and that's it!

The information appears instantly, and you have a Web site to sell your book.

... Got specific words, testimonials, links, videos, and more you want to use?

... Want to make fast changes?

No problem!

Just access your account online any time and make the changes you want... instantly.

How cool is that?!

"Well, this is all well and good Jill, but I don't know how to market my book."

Yep. I hear that one a lot.

That's why we answer your self-publishing questions... fast!

At any time, you can go to our online forum and talk to other authors just like you.

- Ask questions and get answers.
- Find out what works and what doesn't.
- Talk to me personally.

All free stuff and the chance to get some publicity too!

I even have a blog on the site and at Smallbiz America where I interview self-published authors to get their insider secrets and tips.

This is valuable information you can use to save time, find the right tools to help you sell your book... and even get some free publicity.

(You see, I choose a few authors each month to interview for my blogs and promote on my monthly press-releases.)

Now, you may think this sounds too good to be true.

I know. You are bombarded with marketing ploys about selling books and being successful. And as a fellow author, I'm sick of scams and "big promises" too.

But you don't need to stress about selling your books online.

If you don't like having your own Web presence and selling your books on the site, you just cancel your account.

There is no long-term contract or hassle. Period.

You end the account whenever you want, and it goes into effect immediately.

If you want to sell your self-published books, jexbo can help you right now.

jexbo gives you the information, space and power to market and sell your books without wasting time or money.

Now, I've put a lot of effort into the site to make it a reality (I was even ripped off by one tech company in the process of creating it!) so I'd love to hear what you think.

Share www.jexbo.com on Facebook and Twitter.

Please visit www.jexbo.com, post your book, and tell your friends about it.

Even better, buy a book while you're at the site and support your fellow, self-published authors.
